

Stokes' Ghost

"In 1833, British sailor James Stokes jumped ship in Monterey Bay with a booty of stolen medicine. He opened a downtown pharmacy and launched a thriving medical practice as "Dr. Stokes." Despite a knack for killing his patients, he landed a commission as the personal physician to California Governor Jose Figueroa. Within a year, the governor was dead. Dr. Stokes eventually met his demise but his ghost still lingers in the home where he lived."

This is the legend of Stokes' Ghost.
